FOOTNOTES FROM FRANK

My Most Important Job

I'm sure most of you have been aware this week of the tragic death of Kobe Bryant, the famous basketball player. I felt a lot of empathy on Sunday night for the people and hosts responsible for the Grammy Awards in Los Angeles. Kobe Bryant's death gave them such a challenging set of circumstances to have to deal with, because as they were trying to begin the Grammy Awards show at the Staples Center Arena, hundreds of people were showing up, creating a memorial and holding a vigil outside the same arena, in honor of Kobe. That had to be so difficult, dealing with such a range of emotions, all within the same location. But another thing about Kobe Bryant's death really hit home with me. And that was the fact that he died, along with one of his daughters, because he chose to spend time with her, and invest himself in her life. And I too, had just gotten back from a trip to the mountains with my daughter, for the exact same reason. I applaud Kobe for knowing the importance of spending time with his kids. It's so sad that he won't have the opportunity to spend time with his other 3 children. Maybe that's the real tragedy! There were also three other parents in the helicopter with their children, all demonstrating the importance of spending time together, and making a positive impression in their children's lives. It's something that I have always treasured, and continue to try to do, even though my children are 35 and 40 years old. I really enjoy spending time with them, and I'm so thankful that they like to hang around with me! (and put up with my DAD jokes!) We do have fun together, but we also talk about seriousContinued things like work, finances, and marriage. My children share my faith, so God's influence on our lives is never far away from the conversation either. I know my children trust me with their innermost confidences, and I with them, but just being around them nurtures my soul. I'm so blessed that God has allowed me to spend so much time with them. I hope they feel the same. It reminds me of how the Lord loves to spend time with us. Hopefully, we have the same desire to spend time with Him. My children have busy, full lives just like yours. And I know that sometimes we don't get to spend the time together that we would like to. But my prayer for you is that you get to take every advantage of the time you have together with your children and continue to be a positive influence in their lives. (After all, they do produce our grandkids, right???) And if you haven't talked to them in a while, give them a call, out of the blue, or stop in to see them unexpectedly. I guarantee that it will be meaningful to you, and probably to them too!

Plus Generation Choir

Notes from Carson

Greetings! My name is Carson Wagner, and I have the pleasure of serving as the Plus Generation Choir director. We meet every Wednesday at 10am to fellowship and sing hymns and songs of praise, and I would love for you to join us! You don't have to be a trained vocalist or even be able to read music. Just come and have fun singing great songs of the faith! We participate in several outings during the year, including singing at assisted living centers and even local choir festivals. Of course, we always enjoy a great meal together when we travel!

Email me at carson.wagner@fbcgrapevine.com if you'd like to learn more!
