Colossians 4:5-6

“If this distinction is a correct one, it immediately commends itself by its sanity and realism. Harm can be done by sincere believing people who feel compelled to preach and testify to those with whom they mix in shop and office. Rightly aware of the importance of their message, the sad ignorance of many of their neighbors, and the urgency of the times, they plunge in bravely (whatever the temperature!).

But direct assault on entrenched apathy is seldom successful and can never be carried out by normally sensitive people without great cost to nerve and confidence. Alas, one consequence of failure of such verbal witnessing is discouragement sufficiently severe at times to lead to disengagement from this part of the battle altogether.”

“From a college graffiti wall - “Jesus said to them, ‘Who do
