Coalition of Ministries Helping Those Struggling With and Impacted by Sexual Sin Adds Key Staff, Sets Conference

National network of churches and Christian nonprofits is a more relevant voice than ever as it continues to champion a biblical sexual ethic to individuals and the culture

Restored Hope Network, the coalition of ministries serving those who desire to overcome sinful relational and sexual issues in their lives, has strengthened its team as it looks to even more boldly advocate for scriptural integrity in a culture that daily seems to further abandon the truths that anchor God's view of sexuality.

RHN works alongside churches and Christian nonprofits to connect those seeking help with local member ministries and other resources, as well as supporting, equipping and connecting those local groups. Accomplishing this work is a team headed by RHN Director Anne Paulk, who has more than two decades of experience helping individuals with unwanted same-sex attractions steward their sexuality in God-honoring ways.

Paulk recently added three new members to the RHN team with strong ministry experience, all of whom have previously worked to communicate to millions the truths RHN espouses.

"We're as excited as we've ever been to move forward in our mission to proclaim that Jesus Christ has life-changing power for all who submit to Him," Paulk said. "We're blessed to have found such quality, qualified new team members to assist us in this calling."

Karen Eaglin, the group's new executive administrator, served for more than 10 years as project manager for Focus on the Family's public policy division, where she handled the day-to-day and on-site details of the organization's Love Won Out conferences at which Paulk frequently spoke. Eaglin has also worked as program director for the Glen Eyrie Group, which operates The Navigators, and as marketing project manager for Charis Bible College.

Joining her on the RHN team is Judy Preciado, also an alumnus of Focus on the Family, who will serve as conference coordinator. She is responsible for planning and staging the HOPE 2019 annual conference, to be held June 21-22 in Minneapolis. Preciado has extensive event planning and marketing experience dating back to the more than 20 years she spent at Focus.

Rounding out the new additions is Gary Schneeberger, Focus on the Family's former vice president of communications under both Dr. James Dobson and current president Jim Daly. Schneeberger's work at Focus included handling all communications for Love Won Out. In 2016, Schneeberger founded his own PR firm, ROAR, which has been tasked with handling all communications and PR needs for RHN.

"Karen, Judy and Gary know firsthand the power of God to offer healing and hope," Paulk explained. "And, just as important, they know how to share the hope that comes from that power with clarity, love and compassion."
